

Kayla Ellison (she/her/hers) received two bachelor's degrees, in Sign Language Interpretation and German Studies, from the University of South Florida in 2018. She is passionate about advocating for the needs of Deaf and Hard of Hearing youth in the K-12 education system, where she currently works as an educational interpreter and a freelancer. Kayla holds her National Interpreter Certification (NIC) as well as a score of 4.8 on the Educational Interpreter Performance Assessment (EIPA). Her educational journey led her to Saint Catherine's University where she is currently a graduate student in the Master of Arts in Interpreting Studies and Communication Equity program. Outside of the interpreting field, she loves to travel/experience diverse cultures and learn from everyone she meets.